

Mitigating Sustainability and ESG Risks with Avetta One

Creating Sustainable Supply Chains for the Future

An organisation is only as strong as its network of suppliers. This statement holds particularly true as the global economy marches forward and supply chains evolve in response. This progress, however, brings complexities and new risk factors that organisations need to constantly monitor and mitigate.

Increased demand from investors and shareholders for greater corporate disclosure and confirmation of regulatory performance has increased the level of attention on how organisations demonstrate their Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) credentials. The growth in demand for business and supply chain transparency, positive societal changes, and a reduction in their environmental impact is being driven by legislation and consumer pressure. Under such circumstances, the absence of proper ESG controls could lead to a prevalence of processes with negative externalities, in turn, giving rise to ESG and sustainability risks in the form of unethical work practices, forced labour, corruption, slavery, climate crisis, etc.

Up to 90% of an organisation's ESG footprint is in its supply chain. But it is not easy to decipher what sustainability measures are material to the hiring client and what goals make sense for each supplier.

The Global Sustainability & ESG Imperative – why does it matter?

Companies that fulfil the ESG criteria will be able to enjoy an overall cost reduction of up to 10 per cent.

ESG regulatory requirements is one of the top 5 risks today for supply chain executives.

Despite the global push to embed environmental, social, and governance measures into business strategy, 64% of organisations lack a proper sustainability programme.

In Europe alone, 60% of companies are not aligned to sustainability strategies.
